Core message: LOVA is a private SRHR and wellness companion for adults across Africa, helping users learn, track, ask, share, and care with confidence.

Full brand description:

LOVA is a private SRHR and wellness companion for adults across Africa. It helps users learn about their bodies, track periods and pregnancy journeys, ask sensitive questions, join anonymous conversations, access care products, and understand their wellbeing in real life context.

LOVA is rooted in African realities, cultures, privacy needs, relationships, care gaps, myths, stigma, and everyday wellness experiences.

LOVA is not only about sexual and reproductive health as a medical topic. It is about contextual SRHR: sexual and reproductive health connected to real life, culture, relationships, emotions, access, privacy, confidence, preparation, protection, and care.

LOVA is not here to shame people into better choices. LOVA is here to make support easier to find, questions easier to ask, and wellbeing easier to care for.

Intro Section

Heading

Wellness support should feel safe, not scary.

Copy

Many people grow up with questions about their bodies, periods, pregnancy, protection, consent, relationships, pleasure, infections, emotions, and personal care, but not everyone has a safe place to ask.

Some questions feel too personal. Some feel embarrassing. Some are surrounded by myths, silence, pressure, or fear.

LOVA exists to change that.

We make contextual SRHR and wellness easier to understand, easier to talk about, and easier to manage, with privacy, dignity, and care at the center.

What LOVA Does

Heading

One private space for your wellness journey.

Copy

LOVA brings together the tools, information, community, and care support people need to make informed decisions about their bodies, relationships, and wellbeing.

Feature Cards

Learn

Simple, trusted content on periods, pregnancy, contraception, consent, relationships, infections, body changes, emotional wellbeing, personal care, and everyday wellness.

Track

Period tracking, pregnancy tracking, symptom logging, mood notes, energy patterns, reminders, and wellness insights that help users understand their body over time.

Ask

Private question support for sensitive topics people may not feel comfortable asking out loud.

Share

Anonymous conversations through Unfiltered, a space for real questions, real stories, polls, and peer support.

Kungwi Guidance

Access culturally aware guidance from traditional SRHR and relationship guides who offer relatable, real life support for sensitive questions around body confidence, intimacy, relationships, preparation, care, communication, and life transitions.

Care

Access selected wellness, period care, pregnancy support, protection, and personal care products in a discreet and supportive way.

Why LOVA Exists

Heading

Because silence should not be the default.

Copy

Sexual and reproductive health is part of everyday life, but it is often treated as something people should hide, fear, or figure out alone.

LOVA helps close that gap by giving users a trusted starting point.

We believe people deserve support that is clear, practical, culturally aware, emotionally intelligent, and non judgmental. Whether someone is tracking a period, following a pregnancy journey, learning about contraception, asking about consent, preparing for intimacy, dealing with body changes, or looking for care products, LOVA helps them take the next step with more confidence.

Contextual SRHR Section

Heading

SRHR does not happen in isolation. Life gives it context.

Copy

LOVA understands that sexual and reproductive health is connected to many parts of life: culture, relationships, family expectations, faith, privacy, money, access to products, confidence, safety, emotional wellbeing, and the information people grow up hearing.

That is why LOVA does not only answer clinical questions. It helps users understand the context around their choices, their bodies, their relationships, and their wellbeing.

LOVA also brings in the Kungwi aspect: trusted traditional guides on sexual and reproductive wellbeing who understand African realities, relationships, womanhood, intimacy, preparation, care, and sensitive life transitions.

Through LOVA, Kungwi guidance is reimagined for a modern, private, and safe digital space. It offers relatable, real life support for questions that often need cultural understanding as much as factual information.

This gives users access to guidance that feels familiar, human, and practical, while still encouraging professional medical care when a concern requires clinical attention.

Context Cards

Body

Periods, pregnancy, fertility, symptoms, discharge, cramps, hormones, and body changes.

Choices

Protection, contraception, consent, communication, preparation, and safer decision making.

Relationships

Trust, pressure, boundaries, partner conversations, emotional safety, intimacy, and shared responsibility.

Culture

Myths, stigma, silence, shame, privacy, expectations, traditional wisdom, and the courage to ask better questions.

Kungwi Guidance

Traditional SRHR and relationship guides offering relatable, culturally aware support for sensitive questions about body confidence, intimacy, preparation, care, communication, and life transitions.

Care

Products, routines, reminders, professional support, pregnancy support, and everyday wellness habits.

Trust Cards

Anonymous where it matters

Users can participate in sensitive community conversations without showing their real name.

No shame based messaging

LOVA avoids fear, judgment, and stigma. The goal is to inform, not embarrass.

Clear community rules

Unfiltered is guided by respect, safety, consent, and harm prevention.

Culturally aware support

LOVA recognizes African realities, including traditional guidance, community expectations, relationship norms, privacy needs, and everyday life pressures.

Support pathways

When a question requires deeper help, LOVA guides users toward appropriate support.

Educational, not diagnostic

LOVA provides wellness education and guidance. It does not replace professional medical care.

About LOVA

Hero Copy

LOVA is a private SRHR and wellness companion for adults across Africa, helping users learn, track, ask, share, and care with confidence.

Rooted in African realities, cultures, privacy needs, care gaps, relationships, and everyday wellness experiences, LOVA supports adults who want to learn without shame, ask without fear, track without confusion, and care for themselves with more confidence.

Our Story

LOVA was created from a simple truth: people have questions about their bodies, relationships, choices, care, and wellbeing, but many do not have a safe place to ask.

Across many communities, sexual and reproductive health is surrounded by silence, stigma, myths, and discomfort. At the same time, people are navigating real life: relationships, privacy, culture, money, pressure, pregnancy, body changes, health concerns, and emotional wellbeing.

LOVA exists to offer another way.

A way that feels private.

A way that feels human.

A way that respects culture without allowing shame to block care.

A way that helps people make informed choices about their bodies and lives.

LOVA brings together learning, period and pregnancy tracking, anonymous community, Kungwi guidance, expert informed support, and wellness care in one digital platform designed around dignity, privacy, and trust.

Mission

To simplify access to trusted contextual SRHR information, period and pregnancy tracking tools, community support, culturally aware guidance, and care for adults across Africa.

Vision

A future where every person can understand their body, make informed choices, access support, and speak about sexual, reproductive, and everyday wellness without shame.

What We Believe

SRHR education should be clear

People should not need complicated medical language to understand their own bodies.

Context matters

Health decisions are shaped by culture, relationships, privacy, access, emotions, beliefs, information, and everyday realities.

Privacy is care

Sensitive questions deserve safe, discreet, and respectful spaces.

Wellness should include dignity

No one should feel ashamed for wanting to learn, prepare, protect themselves, track their body, follow a pregnancy journey, or seek support.

Men belong in the conversation

Healthier relationships and communities require informed women, men, partners, and peers.

African realities deserve thoughtful solutions

LOVA is designed with African cultures, languages, relationships, access gaps, myths, stigma, traditional guidance, and lived experiences in mind.

Traditional wisdom can meet modern care

LOVA recognizes the value of culturally familiar guidance, including Kungwi support, while still encouraging professional medical care when clinical attention is needed.

Digital support should lead to better care

Technology should help people learn, prepare, and seek the right support. It should not replace professional care when professional care is needed.

What Makes LOVA Different

LOVA is not only a content platform.

LOVA is not only a tracker.

LOVA is not only a community.

LOVA is not only a shop.

LOVA brings these experiences together in one connected contextual SRHR and wellness ecosystem.

Users can learn, track, ask, share, access Kungwi guidance, and care, while partners can use LOVA to support awareness, engagement, referrals, insights, campaigns, and community wellbeing.

Track Your Wellness

Hero Copy

Your body has patterns. LOVA helps you understand them.

Track your period, pregnancy journey, symptoms, mood, energy, body changes, reminders, and wellness notes in one calm, private space.

Whether your cycle is regular, changing, confusing, painful, or connected to a pregnancy journey, LOVA helps you notice what is happening and prepare with more confidence.

Period Tracking Section

Heading

Understand your cycle beyond dates.

Copy

Your menstrual cycle can affect more than when your period starts. It may influence your mood, energy, appetite, sleep, skin, cramps, discharge, focus, and emotional wellbeing.

LOVA helps you track these changes over time so you can better understand your body and know when something may need attention.

Cycle Phases Section

Heading

Know your phases. Care for yourself better.

Copy

LOVA helps users understand the different phases of the menstrual cycle in simple language, so body changes feel less confusing.

Menstrual Phase

This is when bleeding happens. Some people feel tired, sensitive, reflective, or low in energy.

Care tip: Rest where possible, hydrate, eat nourishing foods, and use gentle movement if it feels good.

Follicular Phase

This phase begins after menstruation starts and hormones gradually rise. Some people feel clearer, lighter, or more motivated.

Care tip: This can be a good time to rebuild routines, plan, learn, and move your body.

Ovulation Phase

This is when the body may release an egg. Fertility is often higher around this time.

Care tip: If avoiding pregnancy, use reliable protection. If trying to conceive, this may be an important window to understand.

Luteal Phase

This phase happens before the next period. Some people experience PMS symptoms such as mood changes, cravings, breast tenderness, bloating, or fatigue.

Care tip: Prioritize sleep, hydration, gentle movement, and support for emotional wellbeing.

Fertile Window Section

Heading

Helpful estimates, not guarantees.

Copy

LOVA can estimate your fertile window using the cycle information you provide. These estimates can help you understand your body better, but they should not be used as your only method of contraception.

For pregnancy prevention, speak to a qualified health provider about reliable contraception options.

Tracking Disclaimer

Heading

Important note

Copy

LOVA tracking tools provide estimates and educational support. They are not medical diagnosis, treatment, antenatal care, or emergency care.

Cycle and pregnancy related information may not be accurate for everyone, especially when cycles are irregular, postpartum, affected by stress, influenced by hormonal contraception, or changed by health conditions.

Real questions. Real stories. Anonymous support.

Unfiltered is LOVA's anonymous community space for honest contextual SRHR and wellness conversations. It is where users can share experiences, ask questions, respond to polls, and learn from one another without revealing their identity.

Why Unfiltered Exists

Heading

Because some questions are hard to ask out loud.

Copy

People often carry sensitive questions alone. They wonder whether their body is normal, whether their relationship is healthy, whether they made the right choice, whether they need help, whether pregnancy could be possible, whether symptoms matter, or whether anyone else has experienced the same thing.

Unfiltered gives users a place to ask, share, and learn, while still protecting privacy and community safety.

What You Can Do

Share anonymously

Post a question, confession, experience, or reflection without using your real name.

Ask sensitive questions

Ask about periods, pregnancy, protection, consent, relationships, infections, body changes, intimacy, emotional wellbeing, or personal care.

Respond to polls

See what others think, feel, or experience, and learn from shared community patterns.

Learn from real stories

Read experiences that help you feel less alone and more informed.

Get guided support

When a question needs deeper care, LOVA can guide users toward Kungwi guidance, educational content, expert support, or professional care.

Community Culture

Heading

Honest, but respectful. Anonymous, but accountable.

Copy

Unfiltered is designed for openness, not harm. LOVA welcomes real conversations, but we do not allow bullying, harassment, shame, exploitation, hate, misinformation, or unsafe advice.

Everyone deserves to feel respected when asking sensitive questions.

Frequently Asked Questions

Hero Copy

Good questions deserve clear answers. Here are some of the things people often ask about LOVA.

What is LOVA?

LOVA is a private SRHR and wellness companion for adults across Africa, helping users learn, track, ask, share, and care with confidence.

Who is LOVA for?

LOVA is designed for adults aged 18 and above, especially young women, men, partners, students, early career adults, peer educators, and anyone seeking clearer information and support for sexual, reproductive, and everyday wellness.

Is LOVA only for women?

No. LOVA supports women, men, partners, and adults who want to understand contextual SRHR and wellness better. Some tools focus on period and pregnancy tracking, while others support learning, protection, consent, relationships, sexual health, emotional wellbeing, personal care, and community conversations.

Is LOVA only for people in Africa?

LOVA is designed for adults across Africa and rooted in African realities, but the platform can still support users in other countries who need clear, private, and stigma free SRHR and wellness information.

Does LOVA include period tracking?

Yes. LOVA supports period tracking, cycle notes, symptoms, mood, energy, body changes, reminders, and wellness insights.

Does LOVA include pregnancy tracking?

Yes. LOVA supports pregnancy related tracking, reminders, body changes, symptoms, questions, and care notes. Pregnancy content is educational and supportive, but it does not replace antenatal care or medical advice from a qualified health professional.

What is contextual SRHR?

Contextual SRHR means sexual and reproductive health understood in real life context. It includes the body, relationships, culture, privacy, myths, emotions, access to care, protection, consent, personal care, and the everyday decisions people make.

What is Kungwi guidance on LOVA?

Kungwi guidance refers to culturally familiar support from traditional guides who understand relationships, intimacy, preparation, body confidence, care, and sensitive life transitions. On LOVA, this guidance is brought into a modern, private, and safer digital space.

Kungwi guidance is educational and supportive. It does not replace professional medical care when a health concern requires clinical attention.

Is LOVA available in Kiswahili?

LOVA is designed for English and Kiswahili speaking users, with African audiences in mind.

Is LOVA a medical app?

LOVA provides educational information, wellness tools, tracking support, and guidance. It does not replace a doctor, counselor, emergency service, medical diagnosis, or treatment.

Can LOVA predict my period?

LOVA uses the cycle information you provide to estimate your period, fertile window, and related patterns. These predictions are helpful guides, but they are not guaranteed.

Can I use LOVA's cycle tracker as contraception?

No. Cycle predictions should not be used as your only method of contraception. If you want to prevent pregnancy, speak to a qualified health provider about reliable options.

Can I use LOVA anonymously?

Some features, such as Unfiltered community conversations, are designed for anonymous participation. Account related features may still require certain information to operate safely and properly.

Will my community posts show my real name?

Unfiltered is designed for anonymous participation. Users should still avoid sharing personal details that could identify them or someone else.

Is Unfiltered moderated?

Yes. LOVA may moderate content to reduce harm, misinformation, abuse, harassment, exploitation, and unsafe behavior.

What can I find in LOVA Care?

LOVA Care includes selected wellness, SRHR, personal care, period care, pregnancy support, protection, and self care products.

Can I delete my data?

Users may request account deletion or eligible data deletion through the app or by contacting LOVA support.

Is LOVA free?

LOVA may offer free features, with selected paid services or products available through consultations, premium tools, Kungwi guidance, expert support, or the Care section.

How do experts or guides work?

LOVA may connect users to trained guides, Kungwi guides, SRHR educators, or verified professionals for private support. Availability may vary depending on location, topic, and service type.

Short Description

LOVA helps you learn, track, ask, share, and care for your sexual, reproductive, and everyday wellness with privacy and confidence.

Long Description

LOVA is your private SRHR and wellness companion.

Use LOVA to learn about your body, track your period and pregnancy journey, ask sensitive questions, join anonymous community conversations, access culturally aware Kungwi guidance, and discover selected care products in one safe and easy to use app.

With LOVA, you can explore trusted contextual SRHR content, use period and pregnancy tracking tools, participate in Unfiltered community discussions, and take better care of your wellbeing without shame or judgment.

LOVA is designed for adults aged 18 and above.

LOVA provides educational information and wellness support. It does not replace professional medical advice, diagnosis, treatment, counseling, antenatal care, or emergency services.

Design Guidelines Based on the Website Video

The design direction from the website video should be maintained because it fits LOVA well. The visual language should feel soft, warm, premium, feminine but not exclusionary, private, modern, and app focused.

Color Direction

Use the soft palette from the video:

Soft blush pink
Warm peach
Light coral
Gentle lavender
Cream or off white backgrounds
Deep plum or berry accents
Soft rose gradients
Deep charcoal or black text
Black rounded call to action buttons for contrast

The website should feel calm and beautiful, not clinical. Avoid hospital blue, harsh red, neon colors, or overly explicit visuals.

Layout Direction

Use plenty of white space, rounded cards, soft shadows, clean icons, and phone mockups. The design should feel like a wellness technology brand, not a hospital website and not a generic NGO website.

Visual Elements

Use phone mockups to show tracking, learning, community, chat, Kungwi guidance, and care.

Use soft gradient shapes, circular cycle visuals, clean dashboard cards, gentle icons, and African lifestyle imagery or illustrations where appropriate.

Tone of Imagery

Images should feel warm, safe, mature, and relatable. Show African adults in natural, confident, everyday settings.

Avoid imagery that feels too sexualized, too childish, too clinical, or too corporate.

Typography

Use elegant, readable typography. Headings can feel expressive and soft, while body text should be very clear and easy to scan.

Interaction Feel

The website should feel light and calming. Use smooth transitions, soft hover states, rounded buttons, and gentle section movement.

Overall Design Message

The design should communicate:

This is private.

This is beautiful.

This understands African realities.

This respects culture without reinforcing shame.

This combines modern tools with familiar guidance.

This helps people care for themselves with confidence.

Final Locked Brand Message

LOVA is a private SRHR and wellness companion for adults across Africa, helping users learn, track, ask, share, and care with confidence.

It is rooted in African realities, cultures, privacy needs, care gaps, myths, relationships, traditional guidance, and everyday wellness experiences.

LOVA helps users track periods and pregnancy journeys, ask sensitive questions, join anonymous conversations, access Kungwi guidance, discover care products, and understand their wellbeing in real life context.

LOVA is not here to shame people into better choices.

LOVA is here to make support easier to find, questions easier to ask, and wellbeing easier to care for.
